Philadelphia Sanitary Fair.

PHILADELPHIA, June 14.—It is estimated that the receipts of the Sanitary Fair amount to a hundred thousand dollars per day. Add to which half a million cash contributions previously made, and the total receipts are already fully a million. Ninety thousand persons were congregated in the building last night. The railroads are bringing thousands from the interior by extra train. New Jersey and Delaware are also adding to the throng.

Another Account. PHILADELPHIA, June 14 .- The receipts at the great Sanitary Fair now amount to over one million dollars, the cash receipts in the building being over $40,000. The average daily at-tendance is over 30,000 persons.

At ten o'clock to-night the vote stood, on the Union silver vase, as follows; Union League, 240; A. Lincoln, 144; John Welsh, 54; Admiral Farragut, 43; Gen. Meade, 30; Gen. Hancock, 29; H. W. The President's Visit to Philadelphia. PHILADELPHIA, June 14 .- President Lincoln will arrive in this city at 9 o'clock on Wednesday, and be escorted to his hotel by a military and civic procession. On Thursday morning he will be received at the Santary Fair, and during his stay will occupy a chamber set apart for his use, and in which he will receive his friends and the public generally. He will return to Washington on Thursday evening. Preparations are being made to give him a splendid reception.

REBEL NEWS. Grant's Operations on the James River. [From the Richmond Enquirer, of the 8th.] Scouts report that on Saturday last the enemy towed up James river, above the month of Powell's creek, a pontoon bridge, with sixty tents pitched upon it. Perhaps this is the bridge upon which Grant hoped to pass after breaking through the lines of Gen. Lee. But as he failed to force his way through, the aforesaid pontoon bridge may prove useless above the mouth of Powell's creek, which is in Prince George county. This constructed pontoon bridge will span the river, and should Grant reach the James river near Harrison's Landing, or opposite City Point, it would enable him to throw his army speedily across and push on to Petersburg, while Gen. Lee was making the circuit are und by Richmond. The south side is now the point for which Grant is making—he has abandened all hope of taking Richmond except by siege—by taking possession of Petersburg, and with his eavalry cutting and destroying the Danville Railroad and starving the city into surrender. He is endeavoring to reneat the Vicks surrender. He is endeavoring to repeat the Vicks-burg campaign. His failure to cross the Chickahominy may materially alter his plans; but should he once succeed in fixing himself on the south side, either north or south of the Appomattox, while his amy would be no more formidable there than anywhere else, his cavalry could do us much damage and put us to many inconveniences. It is rumored that a cavalry command from the James river crossed the Chickahominy yesterday at the Forge Bridge, in Charles Uity county going to Grant's army. It is supposed to be a party reconnoiseing the way for Grant to the James river. to the James river. All circumstances point to Grant's going over the James, if Lee will permit

The Situation in Georgia.

From the Atlanta Intelligencer of the 8th. Important changes have taken place within the past two days on the Georgia front. The enemy have abandoned their works above Dal-las, and are withdrawing the masses and concentrating in the strong fortifications nearer the Etowah. This contraction of their lines is evidently for the purpose of securing the es-tablishment of a depot of supplies on the south side of the Etowah river. If Sherman succeeds in this, he will make Alaloo-na a base of operations against us, which will be more formidable than any of the flanking operations he has perpetrated during the campaign.

More Flanking.
[From the Boston Journal.]
The question suggested by recent operations before Richmond is, "Will there be another grand flanking movement by the army of the Potomac ?" The general attack on the enemy's works last Friday showed that they could not works last Friday showed that they could not be carried, except at a cost of life not warranted under the circumstances. On the other hand, Lee has ascertained, by sorties at all hours of the day and night, that he cannot push back our lines. It is for the interest of Lee, however, that the two armies should thus remain for some time facing each other, as the approaching sickly season and the stronger rebel lines will prove to our disadvantage. Besides, the object of Grant is to advance, and of Lee to stop him, and therefore a protraction of the present state of things is a rebel gain. But for these very reasons Grant will not ac-But for these very reasons Grant will not acquiesce in it, any more than he did in the stoppage at Spottsylvania and on the North Anna. But if there is to be another grand flanking movement, designed to take our army into Richmond, will it be on our right or our left ! In support of the former suggestion it may be said that the distance would be no greater than on the other side, as Richmond is situated on a bend in the James, which runs north west above the city, and for some distance below due north. This makes the two routes of approach about the same from the present position of the about the same from the present position of the army. Again, the passage of the Chickahominy would probably be easier above, and a movement in that direction not having been, probably, as much expected, it might encounter less resistance and weaker fortifications. Finally, such a flanking movement west of Richmond would cut off Lee's foraging ground and main supply route. Richmond would cut cif Lee's foraging ground and main supply route.

On the other hand, (though it is doubtful on which side this reason really weighs,) all the precedents in Grant's progress thus far favor a flanking movement to the left. This would bring him into connection with our navy on the James, and into junction with Butler, greatly shortening our base of supplies, and presenting a more available point for assault greatly shortening our base of supplies, and presenting a more available point for assault on the rebel forces. The crossing of the river could be easily made, and Fort Darling might be taken in the rear. The movement, if executed with the celerity of those heretofore, would probably cut off the large rebel force now besieging Butler and guarding the Petersburg road. Such is a mere glance at both sides of this question. which remains in the best of hands, and the solution of which we are confident of receiving in due time.
